WOOD

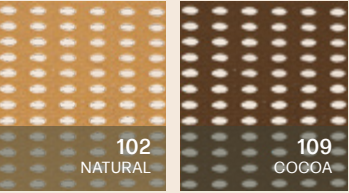

Malaysian Oak

Malaysian oak is a tropical hardwood tree that is mostly grown in extensive rubberwood plantations throughout Southeast Asia. It is durable, medium-density timber that is highly resistant to warping and fungus once treated, making it a popular, cost-effective alternative to traditional oaks.

Veneer

Veneer is thin slices of authentic premium wood – such as Malaysian oak, Mindy, Ash or Walnut; applied over a stable base like Medium Density Fibreboard (MDF). Often preferred in high-quality furniture as it prevents warping and allows for consistent, beautiful grain patterns that solid wood cannot always provide.

SYNTHETIC RATTAN

Synthetic rattan is artificially engineered to be sturdier and more durable than natural rattan, while still offering the same look and feel. Composed of Polyethylene (PE) infused with UV-resistant additive, to prevent fading, cracking, and mold.

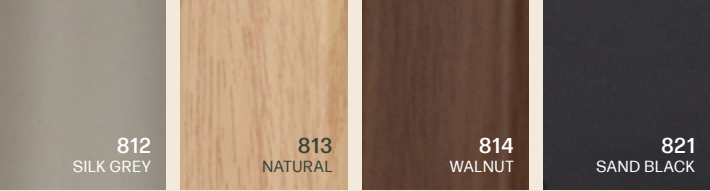

LAMINATE & MELAMINE

Laminate is made from layers of kraft paper soaked in phenolic resin, topped with a decorative paper and a melamine overlay. Pressed under extreme heat and high pressure to create a thick, impact-resistant sheet that is glued onto surfaces like tabletops.

Melamine is a single decorative paper soaked in melamine resin and thermally fused directly to a wood base (MDF or particleboard) using low pressure. It is pre-finished board that is highly cost-effective and ideal for cabinets and shelving.

METAL

Stainless steel is a durable alloy of steel and chromium known for its bright lustre and exceptional resistant to rust, corrosion, and staining. Its strength and low-maintenance nature make it an ideal, long-lasting material for modern furniture.

SINTERED STONE

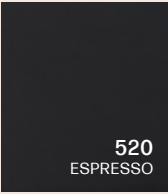

Sintered stone is man-made surface created by fusing natural minerals (like quartz and feldspar) under extreme pressure and heat. This “sintering” process creates an ultra-dense, non-porous slab that is significantly harder and more durable than marble. It is virtually immune to scratches, heat, and stains.
